"The Civil War in American Memory"

The Myth of the Confederacy

Monday, February 6, 7:00 PM

Dr. William Rogers of Drew University, continues his series of lectures exploring key debates about the Civil War to shed light on the events that still inspire—and trouble—Americans 150 years later.

We will explore just how unified the South was in its support of secession and will look at polling results that show how modern Americans view the Civil War.

Registration for these lectures is now closed. Syllabus and recommended reading is available at Reference.
